The Wedding Dorothy West

The Wedding is a beautiful, forgotten black classic about love, racism and how history can shape a family in many ways. This story could easily be 100 pages longer, because Dorothy West's prose completely mesmerized me. Set in 1953, we follow the preparations for the wedding of Shelby Coles, the daughter of a wealthy colored family, to Meade, a white jazz musician.

In "The Wedding," by Dorothy West, the major development I saw was in the character of Shelby. From the beginning till the end, the character changes and deals with many changes. Throughout the novel Shelby knows what she wants, knows she never gave a black a chance, and then decides whom she will marry. At the beginning of the novel, Shelby is well focused and knows what she wants.
